

Beth Clark

Beth Clark is a primarily self taught artist living in North Carolina. She enjoys painting the natural world and experimenting stylistically from realism to abstraction. Greenville Brushstrokes has offered her many opportunities to show and sell her work including the bi-annual shows, exhibits at A'tavola Café in Greenville, and a show at the Kinston Community Center for the Arts. She has also shown at The Contemporary Art Exchange, and regularly participates in shows held by Arts of the Pamlico, both in Washington, N.C. She currently has work for sale at the Mattie Arts and Visitors Center in Swan Quarter, N.C.

From an early age Beth enjoyed drawing and painting. Her mother, a former art teacher, kept art supplies around the house and creating pictures was one of her favorite things to do. As she embarked upon a musical career during her college years, making visual art fell by the wayside. It has only been in the last several years that she has rekindled her interest in painting and has begun practicing nearly every day. Her favorite mediums are oils, water-mixable oils, oil pastels, and acrylic.

Her love of nature and animals, especially birds, inspires her painting. She is happiest viewing a sunset, cloud gazing, marveling at the expansiveness of the ocean, or playing with her busy little Jack Russell Terrier Gracie. Her goal in painting is to evoke the same sense of peacefulness she feels when outdoors enjoying God's creation.
